

Designed particularly for the 11 to 14 age group, this text is part of a series aiming to provide lively narratives about real people and communities whose lives are strongly motivated by their faith. There are three stories in each book, plus a general introduction to the religion in question and sets of questions follow each story. These have been specially designed to test knowledge and understanding and to provide ideas for class project work and group discussion. There is a word list for specialist terms which are highlighted in bold type in the text, and selected customs, festivals and rituals are introduced into the stories to give teachers useful taking-off points for more detailed study. The books have been designed specially to provide starting points for thematic and topic work in Religious Education, and as support material for the study of some of the major religions.

In Buddhism, faith (Pali: saddha, Sanskrit: sraddha) refers to a serene commitment to the . Thus, faith gives guidance in leading a life of charity, morality and religious qualities. Faith also covers ideas such as the nature of existence. Buddhism is the world's fourth-largest religion with over million followers, or over 7% of the global population.

Recently I was asked to comment on issues between Buddhism and Christianity. Within each religious tradition an understanding of life, values and social. Learn about samsara and nirvana and how Buddhists believe we can influence what happens to us when we die with BBC Bitesize GCSE Religious Studies. I spoke with him recently about his Catholic faith and the Buddhist thought and practice that have entered into his thinking and life as he has.

Faith, in Nichiren Buddhism, is grounded in the experience of applying Buddhism and seeing improvements in the quality of one's life. Faith could be described.
