

The only reason Bria Sheridan was at the Springs resort was to save her grandmother from being swindled out of all her money. And the only reason she agreed to stay and give the place a chance was because she loved her grandmother. That and...she didnt really have any other place to go. In fact, if she didnt turn in a killer photo assignment, shed lose her job completely. Head chef for the resort, Jax Carver never stays in one place very long, and its about time he thought about moving on again, especially since hes starting to care about the people hes met in Cedar Springs. But before he goes, he might as well help the dark haired, beauty who clearly has a chip on her shoulder that hed love to knock off. A Bria needs a photo spread that will save her career and Jax can help her get it. What she doesnt need is the undeniable attraction between them, unless of course they can both keep it casual with no expectations. And thats a lot to gamble on, especially since neither of them are counting on having any real feelings. But when those feelings are put to the test, will their connection be strong enough to save them? Or will the chance for love be lost for good? Like all my books, Midnight Springs can be read and enjoyed as a stand alone novel, but are even more enjoyable when you read them as a series.
